WHAT THE CHIMNEY SANG.

BY BRET HARTE.

Over the chimney the night-wind sang
And chanted a melody no one knew;
And the woman stopped as the babe she tossed,
And thought of the one she had long since lost,
And said, as her tear-drops back she forced,
"I hate the wind in the chimney."

Over the chimney the night-wind sang
And chanted a melody no one knew;
And the Children said, as they closer drew,
"'Tis some witch that is cleaving the black night through—
'Tis a fairy trumpet that just then blew,
And we fear the wind in the chimney."

Over the chimney the night-wind sang
And chanted a melody no one knew;
And the Man, as he sat on his hearth below,
Said to himself, "It will surely snow,
And fuel is dear, and wages low,
And I'll stop the leak in the chimney."

Over the chimney the night-wind sang
And chanted a melody no one knew;
But the Poet listened and smiled, for he
Was Man, and Woman, and Child, all three,
And he said: "It is God's own harmony,
This wind that sings in the chimney."

WHERE THE BEAUTIFUL RIVERS FLOW.

BY FATHER RYAN.

Oh, I'll sing to-night of a fairy land, in the lap of the ocean set,
Of all the lands I've traveled o'er, tis the loveliest land I've met;
Where the willows weep and the roses sleep, and the balmy breezes blow,
In that dear old land, that sweet old land, where the beautiful rivers flow.

But oh alas! how can I sing? 'tis an exile breathes the strain,
Of that dear old land of my youthful love I may never see again;
And the very joys that fill my breast must ever change to woe,
For that dear old land, that sweet old land, where the beautiful rivers flow.

But I'll sing of the lonely old churchyards where our fathers' bones are laid—
Where the cloisters stand, those ruins grand that our tyrant foes have made;
And I'll strike the harp, with a mournful touch, till the glistening tears will show,
For that dear old land, that sweet old land, where the beautiful rivers flow.

And I'll sing of Emmett's lonely fate, and of his lonely grave—
Of his early doom, and his youthful bloom, and his spirit more than brave;
And ah! how blest and calm his rest, tho' his grave be cold and low,
In that dear old land, that sweet old land, where the beautiful rivers flow.

And I'll sing of Tone and the Geraldine, proud Edward true and blest—
They won the crown—the martyr's crown—and they sleep in shade and rest,
In heavenly mould their names are rolled—they died in manhood's glow,
For that dear old land, that sweet old land, where the beautiful rivers flow.

And I'll sing of Ireland's ancient days, when her sires were kingly men,
Who led the chase, and the manly race thro' forest, field and glen;
Whose only word was the shining sword—whose pen the patriot's blow,
For the dear old land, the sweet old land, where the beautiful rivers flow.

Miscellaneous.

Scrap-Books.

The best paste for scrap-books is made of flour. Apply it with a soft brush to the back of the paper to be pasted in and pat down the scrap with a soft cloth. Both sides of the leaf may be scrapped, and many successive pages filled at once, but care should be taken to remove all paste from each page when it is completed, and the book should be left wide open to dry. A well-filled scrap-book is a very pleasant companion of a rainy day, especially if taste and discretion have been exercised in its arrangement. Stories should be in a part of the book by themselves; the same may be said of poetry, and of wit. If all the newspapers usually torn and burned for kindling were carefully scissored there might be in every family a book of wit and wisdom, of information, and entertainment second to none in the family library, always excepting the Bible. It is well to accumulate quite a store of scraps before beginning the book and employ some rainy day of leisure in arranging them properly and fastening them in place. Picture-books for children, far superior, in point of variety and interest, to any in the shops, may be made by saving up pictures and pasting them into some volume not of intrinsic merit—an old census book with good binding answers the purpose. At intervals through the book a half dozen leaves should be cut off smoothly, leaving a half inch margin, to make room for the scrappings and keep the book in good order.

Ambition.

A love for activity, a desire to excel and to gain a position in the world are commendable. They who bless the race, elevate man, inspire him with true courage, soften the indurations of our being, increase mental and moral power, are the true heroes and heroines. They are the benefactors of the world who leave it better for having lived in it. But he who encourages cruelty and delights in blood, either on the field of battle or in the retired wayside is the knave and true ruffian. He who kills, is prompted by a love of glory (?), is not less a murderer than he who steals stealthy on his victim to gratify an uncontrollable hate, while the enormity of the crime must be graduated by the number of lives sacrificed in the injury sustained. He who robs a nation of its wealth destroys its material growth, abridges its peace, happiness, its prosperity, its mind, muscle and mortals by war is not less a robber than he who takes the private purse and then kills. The more guilty one is he whose depredations are on the most extensive scale. Music, gay tinselry and dazzling accoutrements can never change the real nature of crime. To murder is to maliciously take life. The more lives taken, the greater the turpitude, the deeper the criminality. To rob is to take wealth, material, mental or moral, ruthlessly, while the more extensive the scale the more robbery is committed.

The World Without Sunday.

Think how the abstraction of Sunday would enslave the working classes, with which we are identified. Think of labor thus going on in one monotonous and eternal rack, fingers forever straining, the brow forever drooping, the loins forever aching, and the weary brain forever scheming. Think of the beauty it would efface, the merry heartedness it would extinguish, the giant strength it would tame, the resources of nature it would crush, the sickness it would bring, of the projects it would wreck, the groans it would extort, the lives it would immolate, and the cheerless grave it would prematurely dig. See them toiling and fretting, and grinding and hewing, and weaving and spinning, sowing and gathering, mowing and reaping, raising and building, digging and planting, and striving and struggling in the garden and in the field, in the granary and in the barn, in the factory and in the mill, in the warehouse and in the shop, in the mountain and in the ditch, on the roadside and in the country, out at sea and on the shore, in the day of brightness and of gloom. What a picture this world would present if we had no Sabbath.

"It is very curious," said an old gentleman to his friend, "that a watch should be kept perfectly dry when it has a running spring inside."

Lion Hunting in Algeria.

A Chicago man has been enjoying the excitement of lion hunting in Algeria, and sends to the Tribune of that city an account of his adventures. The following passage occurs in the narrative: About three miles from the entrance of the gorge in a deep ravine running off to one side is what is known as Monkey Valley, where there are a lot of wild monkeys. By paying a couple of francs to an old Arab, whom we found in a hut close by, we were led off this ravine for about a quarter of a mile, and, after hunting around for a few minutes came upon a whole colony of our cousins. There were probably a hundred altogether, some hanging from the trees or perched upon them, in all shapes, and a few scampering about on the ground among the undergrowth—and all jabbering rapidly and vehemently. They were not altogether wild, and, after a few minutes, some of them even ventured toward us. Others soon followed, and in a quarter of an hour they were all within 50 yards of us, and a few even ventured on the trees above our heads. In a rash moment I tried to enslave a small one which I caught under some bushes. But the moment I caught it I thought Bedlam was broken loose, they all seemed to object—three or four big males especially. I paid no attention to their remonstrances, and turned to go away with my little prisoner, when suddenly a great old granny fell on my head and shoulders, from somewhere up in the clouds. So I said I thought so, too, and laid the little monkey down and quietly took a walk. When I reached the hut I needed a surgeon and a tailor more than usual. I do not remember whether I was very much scared or not, but I do know that I thought afterwards, when calmly meditating about the future, that if lions were much larger and more savage than that old monkey, I did not believe I wanted to see any of them.

About three hours later, the same party that started after the lions before now struck the trail again. It was not difficult to follow, for there was now and then, blood upon it. It led us up and around the side of a hill, until we came to the table land between that and another hill. We went down this for an hour or more, when the leader, who was a hundred yards or more in advance motioned us to stop. He rode back to us, spoke something Arabic to those in advance of us, when he left his horse and went on foot. We all then dismounted, left the horses in charge of three of the men, and followed at some distance in the rear of the leader in perfect silence. In a few minutes we began to hear a noise, which at once gave us to understand we are near the object of our search. It was a deep, rumbling growl. We now took our way more cautiously than before, until we came to a place where there was an abrupt descent for about fifty feet. Here the trail struck off to the right and descended. In looking down into the narrow valley below us we saw to the right a thicket of dense undergrowth. It was from thence the noise proceeded. The brush was so thick that, notwithstanding the elevation and our downward view, we could see nothing. The spot where we halted was covered with fair sized trees, mostly white oaks. We immediately placed ourselves at the brink, side by side, with our guns ready. Thus far we had made no noise, but one of the Arabs in getting into his position, had slipped and let his gun fall among some rocks. Immediately there was a loud growl, and the male lion leaped at one bound into the open space at the foot of the declivity. I shall never forget the feelings of that moment. The magnificent beast stood there for a second, the very personification of power and rage—his mane stood out like bristles, his eyes seemed to flash fire, his mouth, widely distended, emitted a roar which caused the very rock under us to vibrate. It was but a second, although it seemed an age. Nine guns were flashed before him, but their leaden hail seemed only to add fuel to his rage, and not to weaken him. We were too high for him to reach us. In his rage he tore the earth before him with his paws, and roared until my nerves seemed charged with a powerful current of electricity, and I could but with difficulty reload my gun. But sudenly he darted away to the right. Then the leader cried out for us to climb the trees, and everybody ran for a tree and commenced to climb. In my nervousness I found I had left my gun. I ran back to get it, and just as I had reached the tree, and commenced to climb, the lion bounded up the hill at the side. He paused for a moment, I was unable to climb. I dropped my gun on the ground and then dropped myself. I caught his eye. Somebody says if you look a lion boldly in the eye he won't harm you. As a last resort, I tried it on this one; but it must have been a different kind of a lion, or else my effort was a very weak one. I saw that he had made up his mind to eat me, and my look did not seem to make any appreciable change in his line of conduct, so I just set my hair on end, whitened up my face, and started down the other side of the hill on a little sweepstake of my own. But it was unnecessary, for at that moment the men on the trees opened on the lion, and one ball went through his heart, and he fell from mid air with a gigantic bound but half completed. The men jumped down and rushed towards him, but they stopped very suddenly, for the old king of beasts, royal in death as in life, by a terrible effort sprang upon his haunches to leap again at his destroyers, when death seized him and he fell short of his mark.

Our rejoicings were cut short by somebody raising the question of the whereabouts of the lioness. Two of the Arabs started down the thicket. A moment later we heard a couple of shots and a shout of triumph. We all immediately went down and found the lioness quite dead, and almost cold! The Arabs claimed to have killed her; but I knew and so did they, that it was false.

Two men were left in charge of the bodies and the remainder returned to camp. In the general rejoicings that night, after the lions had been brought in, though often invited, Antoin and I took no part. But in the morning, after making some presents to the Sheik, who was now recovered, and taking our leave, we mounted our camels and returned to Ain Oussera caravansary.

ALL MEN ERR.—Let no mistakes nor wrong impressions, of which every man in his studies and elsewhere falls into many, discourage you. There is precious instruction to be got by finding that we are wrong. Let a man try faithfully, manfully, to be right and he will daily grow more and more right. It is at the bottom the condition on which all men have to cultivate themselves. Our very walking is an incessant failing—a failing and a catching of ourselves before we come actually to the pavement.

Self-Acquaintance.

Probably every one has a sacred belief that, however much he may misunderstand his neighbors, he has at least a fair knowledge and appreciation of his own character. He may mistake the motives of others and misinterpret their actions (their heart-secrets being hidden from his); but how can his judgment err concerning one whose every emotion, thought, impulse and motive lies open to his inspection, as do his own? Yet there is hardly anything in which there is greater liability to error than in this very matter of self-acquaintance. While, on the one hand, there seem to be the best opportunities for a correct estimate, on the other, there are special hindrances which prevent it; while, at the first glance, all the governing principles of our own characters seem spread before us in the clearest light of day, a closer view reveals an interesting mist that greatly obscures the reality, or presents it in colors far different from its own.

It will readily be seen that this mist which hides us from our own inspection is self-partiality. It may safely be asserted that we never reason and judge in exactly the same manner upon matters in which we are the chief actors as we do in other cases. There is an absence of that distrust and suspicion as to our own conduct, which is so manifest when we analyze that of another; a disposition to take for granted that our motives and intentions are about right, which we rarely exhibit concerning those of our neighbors. Self-interest and self-love often blind us in regard to our own characters, or rather, by keeping our mental vision fixed steadily on one point, they prevent us from seeing any other. Thus we frequently defend in our own conduct the very same things which we censure severely in another's, and this not from any wanton injustice, but because this veil of self-partiality hides from us in the one case what is obvious enough in the other when the veil is removed.

Much of the unreasonable behaviour of men and women towards each other, and many of their disputes and quarrels, result from this very disposition to palliate their own errors and faults and exaggerate their own virtues. Nothing more surely paves the way to injustice and oppression of all kinds, or more effectually crushes the natural impulses of compassion and sympathy. Social intercourse can rarely be reduced to fixed rules—it must depend for its well-being upon mutual good-will and forbearance. Yet in its every detail there is a right to be carried out and a wrong to be avoided. Justice, compassion, liberality, truth, friendliness are one side; coldness, arrogance, selfishness and oppression on the other. Yet their limits cannot be defined by statutes, each one must settle them for himself, and with this latitude comes the danger of self-deception. In reviewing our own relations with another, how many excuses we frame for seeming neglect of duty—how artfully we place and replace the circumstances so as to persuade ourselves that we were not in fault, and how well satisfied we are when such efforts are crowned with self-complacency! Yet, after all, there is usually left behind a lurking suspicion that all is not right, and a desire to hurry over and cast into oblivion much that would otherwise cause uneasy pricks of conscience. Just as a man who, by extravagance or neglect is rapidly running through his means, shrinks from a thorough examination of his affairs, fearing to face the ruin which it might reveal, and pleads ignorance of his real condition to extenuate his continued prodigality; so, many persons on surveying their own conduct, even with all the excuses and palliatives that self-love can suggest, find so much to create dissatisfaction that they hastily turn from the record and cease the search, lest on looking deeper they should fatally wound their self-esteem. Never was there a more pernicious mistake. Instead of gaining any real satisfaction by thus closing their eyes to facts, they really heap up cause for future remorse and unhappiness. There is no solid, sincere self-enjoyment that does not have its basis in a truthful acquaintance with self in all its phases. The cowardice that shrinks from this knowledge will ever be a prey to suspicion and fear, but the straight-forward and fearless search into the remote corners of the heart, where lurk secret motives, hidden thoughts, and unexpressed emotions, though painful at the time, will fully repay any sacrifice or diligence by putting us upon thoroughly frank, cordial and sincere terms with ourselves.

There is a certain self-depreciation which is by no means desirable. It deals largely in wholesale, depressing and unfair self-condemnation, and is as far removed from that candid and thorough self-acquaintance which we urge as any vanity or self-applause can be. Such ideas are, however, more commonly uttered than felt. There is a "pride that apes humility," which is, of all things, most despicable. True self-knowledge, while it will reveal much for which we must blush, will never destroy self-respect, but rather establish it, by placing it on a firmer, because a truer basis. It will lead us not to parade our faults, but to correct them; not to underrate our virtues, but to enhance them. True modesty and self-respect ever go hand in hand, and nothing so greatly serves to establish their united sway as the most thorough and fearless self-acquaintance. —Phila. Ledger.

Helping Others.

It seems a strange thing, but it is nevertheless true, that sharing another's burden will lighten our own. If you begin doing little things for your neighbor, it will very soon be easy for you to perform great deeds in his behalf. No man is sufficient unto himself. Trust in Providence is nothing but higher belief in humanity. You may feel very much depressed some day, discouraged and well-nigh despairing, when some kind friend happens in—God sent—and you soothed, cheered and encouraged; the veil is lifted, and you are happy once more. Many are able to give substantial help to those who are in need; money, to tide over some financial trouble; food, to keep a family from starving; gifts, that nourish the heart with assurance of love; something that may be a trifle in itself, but helps make up the sum of human happiness. But perhaps you cannot do this; you have a large family and limited income, or are otherwise prevented from making the hand the almoner of the heart. Well, then, draw on the spiritual treasury. Give kind words to those who need them; comfort those who are bowed down; speak lovingly to little children, and encouragingly to those who faint for this support. Stand ready to help everybody.

Christianity and Science.

In the current discussions of the relations of Christianity to science, there is one fact that seems to have dropped out of notice; yet it is full of meaning, and deserves, for Christianity's sake, to be raised and kept before the public. Who, or what, has raised science to its present commanding position? What influence is it that has trained the investigator, educated the people, and made it possible for the scientific man to exist, and the people to comprehend him? Who built Harvard College? What motives form the very foundation stones of Yale? To whom and to what, are the great institutions of learning, scattered all over this country, indebted for their existence? There is hardly one who did not have its birth in, and has not had its growth from Christianity. The founders of all these institutions, more particularly those of greatest influence and largest facilities, were Christian men, who worked simply in the interest of their Master. The special scientific schools that have been grafted upon these institutions are children of the same parents, reared and endowed for the same work. Christianity is the undoubted and indisputable mother of the scientific culture of the country. But for her, our colleges would never have been built—our common schools would never have been instituted. Wherever a free Christianity has gone, it has carried with it education and culture.

The public, or a considerable portion of it, seems to forget this, or has come to regard Christianity as opposed to science in its nature and aims. It is almost regarded, by many minds, as the friend of darkness, as the opponent of free inquiry and the enslaver of thought. The very men who have been reared by her in some instances turn against her, disowning their mother and denying the sources of their attainments, and to-day she has herself almost forgotten that it is her hand that has reared all the temples of learning, framed the educational policy of the nation, and, with wide sacrifice of treasure, reared the very men who are now defending her.—Scribner for March.

Home Courtesies.

A writer in Harper's Bazar makes some excellent remarks concerning courtesies at home. Please listen, good people of the home circle:

"The placing of the arm chair in a warm place for mamma, running for a foot stool for aunty, hunting up papa's spectacles, and scores of little loving deeds, show unsuppressed and loving hearts. But if mamma never returns a smiling 'Thank you dear,' if papa's 'Just what I was wanting Susie,' does not indicate that the little attention is appreciated, the children soon drop the habit. Little people are imitative creatures, and quickly catch the spirit surrounding them. So, if when the mother's spool of cotton rolls from her lap, the father stoops to pick it up, bright eyes will see the act, and quick minds make a note of it. By example, a thousand times more quickly than by precept, children can be taught to speak kindly to each other, to acknowledge favors, to be gentle and unselfish and considerate of the comfort of the family. The boys, with inward pride of their father's courteous demeanor, will be chivalrous and helpful to their young sisters; the girls imitating their mother, will be gentle and patient, even when big brothers are noisy and heedless. In the home where true courtesy prevails, it seems to meet you on the very threshold. You feel the kindly welcome on entering. No rude eyes scan your dress. No angry voices are heard up stairs. No sullen children are sent from the room. A delightful atmosphere pervades the house—unmistakable, yet indescribable.

THE FIGURES.—"There, my dear wife," there is the set of jewelry which you have so long waited for," said a Detroiter as he laid a package before his wife the other evening.

"Oh! you dear old darling, how much did it cost!" she inquired as she tore off the paper.

"Only $50," he replied, carelessly.

"And what's this mark, '$8.50,' on the card for?" she asked as she held it up and looked at him with suspicion in her eyes.

"That—that mark—why, that means that they paid only $8 50 to have the jewelry made!" he replied. "Just think, darling, of their grinding a poor, hard-working artisan down to $8.50!"

She was satisfied with the explanation, and he whispered to himself:

"What a mule I was not to change that $8 50 to $50."—Detroit Free Press.

A story is told of an old gentleman who always took notes of the minister's sermons, and on one occasion read them to the minister himself. "Stop, stop!" said the latter on the occurrence of a certain sentence, "I didn't say that." "I know you didn't," was the reply; "I put that in myself to make sense."

A wealthy merchant is reported as having said:—"I always feel happy when I am advertising, for then I know that, sleeping or waking, I have a strong though silent orator working for me—one who never tires, never sleeps, never makes mistakes, and who is certain to enter the household from which if at all, my trade must come.

March came in like a lamb. It's fleece was white as snow.

The Columbian

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

Friday, March 12, 1875.

The pretty story about James Lick, of California, assigning his immense estate to trustees, to be used for various charitable and benevolent purposes, is all spoiled again. He took another notion, destroyed the papers, and sticks to his dollars like a miser.

The Governor of Arkansas has appointed the 26th inst., as a day of thanksgiving in that State "for the many blessings that have been showered upon the State during the past twelve months," and especially the adoption of a resolution by Congress not to interfere in its internal affairs. They certainly have good reason to be thankful!

General Fitz John Porter has presented to the President another very strong appeal for a rehearing of his case by a board of Army officers. The reasons assigned for a rehearing would procure a new trial for any criminal in the land. Why the government is afraid to do justice to one of the most gallant officers of our army is a question that some of us cannot answer.

Rhode Island is kicking up a miniature rebellion! The Governor of that formidable State, it is true, promises not to resist the United States by force of arms, but he plainly intimates that it is because he is too weak. It seems some of the United States officials have been riding over the authorities and laws of little Rhode Island as roughly as they are accustomed to in the South, and when resistance was threatened they called an armed vessel to their aid. The Rhode Islanders are fighting mad, but like the little boy who is insulted by the big one, it must content itself with making mouths.

Ben. Butler says he is going to Europe during the ensuing season. As most if not all the countries of that continent have laws against infamous and dangerous characters entering upon their soil, it may become necessary for the President to give him some sort of commission to enable him to stay there. Silver spoons are plenty in Europe, but unfortunately for Ben. he is known and the police are efficient there as well as abundant. If Grant must commission him he had better be sent as plenipotentiary to some of the cannibal islands.

Hon. Joseph R. Chandler, of Philadelphia, in a paper read before the social science association of that city, takes the ground that education is not to be regarded as a prevention of crime; it is the power of science and religion and not of intellect which keeps men virtuous. He has had a long experience as a careful observer of convict life, and says: "While, in the lowest order of crimes, I may have found more unlettered than lettered criminals, I have found the former more amendable to gentle moral dealing than the latter were."

It will not do for any northern person who goes south to tell the truth when he comes back if he wishes to remain in good standing with the Republican party. General Grant was denounced as a white-washer the last time he visited the Southern States and expressed his convictions in a report. Messrs Foster and Phelps have been read out of the party for their Louisiana report. The actual condition of affairs at the south is such an indictment of Republican administration as no plea can mitigate or evade. It is essential that the people of the north should be misinformed in order that misgovernment at the south may be perpetuated.—Patriot.

Some queer cases are likely to arise under the Civil-Rights-Negro-Equality bill. In Washington city, a few days ago, a Saloonkeeper was arrested under it for refusing to sell liquor to two darkies. The magistrate, however, decided that the bill did not apply to bar-rooms or the sale of liquor.

In another case a darkey barber refused to shave two sable brethren, saying he worked only for gentlemen. Held, that a man may work for whom he pleases, despite the Civil Rights bill! The army will have to enforce the bill, as the petty officers evidently will not, except in extreme cases, or where political necessities require.

Before the adjournment of Congress Judge Poland gave Ben. Butler the altogether unnecessary information that he was a "d—d liar." Coming from puritan lips this was a little rough, but Ben. replied that his courage had never been impeached (an assertion that confirmed the truth of Poland's remark) and that he was quite able to resent the insult. Poland informed him that while he did not brag on his own courage he had enough for Butler, whereupon the latter sneaked to his seat. The proceeding was neither a dignified nor commendable one, but serves to show in what esteem Butler will be held since he is out of power.

Andy Johnson still seems to labor under the hallucination that he is extremely strong with the people—strong enough to form a party of his own that will elect him President in opposition to both the Democratic and Republican parties, or at least strong enough to compel one or the other of these to adopt him as its candidate. To this end he refuses to be identified with either party in the Senate, though he made different promises in Tennessee to obtain an election. He refused to attend a Democratic caucus of Senators, called for consultation as to their course during the extra session, and which did not propose to bind any body as to individual action. The Democratic Senators ought to have the pluck to discard him and let him stand in a party by himself.

Democratic State Convention.

At a meeting on the 4th of March the Democratic State committee agreed upon Erie as the place and the 8th of September as the time for holding the next Democratic State Convention. Candidates for Governor and State Treasurer will be nominated.

As the committee did not land outside of the State, and as Erie is a most pleasant city to visit, with ample hotel accommodations, and the 8th of September is before the election, we suppose no complaint is in order. How much further the committee would have sent the Convention, had there been a more distant point within the State, we are not officially informed. The objection to holding conventions at distant and unusual points of visitation is that they are only attended by persons having axes to grind, by such as have free railroad passes, and by others who are hired to go, together with some enthusiastic gentlemen—the very persons who above all others are improper ones to make nominations and declare party principles. But the matter is fixed, and the only thing left to be done is to secure the attendance of good reliable delegates, if possible.

Legislative.

On Tuesday an attempt was made in the House at Harrisburg to divert a large portion of the Sinking Fund from its legitimate use, but it was defeated, 80 votes favoring and 102 opposing. Mr. Ryan voted with the majority. Mr. McHenry was not present.

An act to further prohibit and punish usury was defeated in the House on Monday. No yeas and nays published. As such an act would give greater relief to the people than anything that can be passed, it is to be hoped it will again be brought up and approved.

The act for the establishment of new counties, of which we give an account elsewhere, passed the House by yeas 119, nays 60. Vote not published.

An act to give the county of York an additional law Judge passed the House. Why not give it fifteen at once? Until recently one Judge was sufficient for York and Adams. The looseness with which additional law Judges are now asked and granted would seem to indicate that it would be a saving of time to pass a general act allowing every lawyer to go upon the bench whenever he desired to, and in that case let them charge fees like Squires and not tax the public. The thing is certainly getting a little too common to be consistent with the dignity of courts.

The House has passed the general appropriation bill and it has also passed first reading in the Senate. Its distinguished feature is its economy. Sundry charitable appropriation bills are now on their way through the House—for Medical institutions, the various Asylums, Penitentiaries, &c.

The Senate is pushing through a considerable amount of legislation, of indifferent interest, which it is hoped the House will not touch. The bill attacking the new Constitution passed the Senate, in a bungled shape, but has not yet been taken up in the House. As no time is to be lost and much good may be gained by postponing action until next winter, it ought to go over.

Both Houses have agreed to adjourn on the 18th inst

Congress Adjourned!

Absolutely and certainly—the most glorious adjournment that ever occurred on the American continent. It is conceded to have been not only the most corrupt, but in all respects the least patriotic and basest body that ever had official existence at Washington. A universal sense of relief pervades the land since its demise and there are none to give it honor. There were good men of both parties in it—as well as bad of both—but the majority was led and controlled at pleasure by Ben. Butler and the carpet-baggers. It is gone forever, and may its like never be seen again. Nearly all the worst characters of it, including Butler, have been defeated by the people, and retire to a deserved obscurity, where at least comparatively they will be powerless for mischief.

The Civil-rights-negro-equality bill was the worst measure passed, shorn of its most offensive features. A worse and far more dangerous measure, the Force bill, was defeated by non-action in the Senate. It had passed the House by a majority that was small in view of the fact that the Radicals had a two-thirds majority, and was urged through two readings in the Senate. But its supporters in the latter body shrunk from any attempt even to bring it up for final passage. It therefore lies—dead!

The bill to admit Colorado as a State passed the House by the aid of half a dozen Democratic votes, after having passed the Senate, was signed by the President and is therefore a law. The New Mexico bill was defeated in the House for want of a two-thirds vote.

The appropriation bills—nine in number, we believe—were all passed. They are all high in figures and extravagant.

The bill making the third or fourth attempt to equalize bounties failed for want of agreement between the two Houses. It would have taken a hundred millions from the Treasury.

The Texas Pacific railroad subsidy bill failed by a small majority. It is only scotched, not killed. Heretofore the most reliable and formidable opposition to such grants came from the Southern Democratic members. In this instance many of them support the measure, alleging that the Northern roads have been similarly aided and that this grant will only be giving them a share of plunder back.

This Congress, therefore, deserves commendation for having refused to pass two vicious measures among the large number proposed, and that is all the praise it is entitled to.

Extra Session of the Senate.

Pursuant to the proclamation of the President, the Federal Senate convened in extra session the next day after the adjournment of Congress. All the new Senators appeared and were sworn, except one from California and one from Nevada. Five of those admitted had been Confederates and took the modified oath. The Senate has no power to pass laws at this extra session, and its duties will be mainly to act on nominations and upon treaties.

Among the first business proposed was a resolution to admit that everlasting darkey, Pinchback, to a seat. Immediate action was postponed.

When ex-President Johnson advanced to the clerk's desk to be sworn, and again when he returned to his seat, there was enthusiastic cheering in the galleries. During a short recess a sort of voluntary ovation was tendered him on the floor. Even Vice President Wilson, who had been a leader in the impeachment business, advanced and obsequiously grasped him by the hand. The ex-President seemed rather gratified at this humbling of his enemies, yet took little notice of them personally. The citizens of Washington greeted him with cheers at all points and with music where opportunity offered. He is evidently just now the lion of Washington, much to the discomfiture and mortification of Gen. Grant and the extreme Radicals.

A Parting Shot.

The Baltimore Gazette makes the following summary of the votes on the Force Bill:

Of the 157 votes in favor of ordering the main question, 103 were cast by men whose terms had expired, and all of whom—with the exception of 17 from the South, who may seek a re-election this year—have been rejected by their constituents. It was their legacy of revenge. All the Massachusetts delegation voted for the bill except Pierce and Dawes. The latter, true to his pledge, voted against it. Garfield, as usual, professed to oppose it, and then, with a number of other Radicals, dodged the vote. The number of dodgers and absentees were 30—not enough indeed to change the result; but it was a cowardly act nevertheless, and will be remembered against them hereafter. This fact we now put on record: Only 54 Republicans re-elected to the next Congress for the bill; 103 votes were cast by men who had no longer any constituencies behind them.

It is now suggested that the Legislature should make "Ground Hog day" a legal holiday. Certainly so a good prophet is worthy the reverence of makers of sham Sundays.

Legislation.

Some of our exchanges complain because the House at Harrisburg has passed so few bills this session, while others, we think with good reason, congratulate the people of the Commonwealth upon such being the case. The new Constitution was intended to check the great evil of unwise and hasty legislation, and its action has been most beneficial in this respect. The fewer bills are passed the better, so long as those which become laws are carefully considered and made to subserve the best interests of the people.—Reading Gazette.

The above is from the English organ of the stern and invincible Democracy of Berks. Excess of Legislation is one of the material evils from which the people of this country have long been suffering, and it is a happy result if the new Constitution has succeeded in checking it. We think, however, that our Democratic House of Representatives is deserving of much of the present credit. Aside from the necessary appropriations, and the adjustment of a few general subjects, the investigation of the condition of the Treasury and the frauds that have been perpetrated upon it, the repeal of the unnecessary tax upon coal, and here and there the repeal of a local law, there is little necessity for legislation. Heretofore the shelves of our lawyers have had the annual addition of a large volume of acts of Assembly which almost every one of them would pronounce a nuisance, and of the contents of which people would have little knowledge until brought in contact with some of their provisions; obscure, arbitrary and otherwise objectionable. A citizen could scarcely remove from township to township, much less from county to county, without encountering a new set of laws for his government, and it was impossible for any except lawyers to acquire familiarity with all their provisions and especially the obligations they imposed. In fact, even the lawyers, when asked some questions regarding every day events, were compelled to consult a half a dozen huge volumes of acts of Assembly to see what legislative interference there had been with common sense, before they could safely answer a client as to his duties and responsibilities. The abatement of that nuisance is a public benefaction.

But very few laws are needed. Some of the old ones might be profitably re-considered, condensed, their expressions cleared from ambiguity, and a heavy assortment entirely repealed because useless, as well as some that are mischievous and others that can not be enforced because public opinion will not sustain them. But that perhaps would more properly be work for a legal commission in the first instance.

What the present Legislature is to be complimented for—especially the Democratic House—is for not passing many laws, for the invaluable example of passing but few and they mostly necessary ones. We hope to see the time when a dozen Legislatures, meeting but once in two years, will pass only a dozen laws, outside of the routine business. Then people will have a chance to know what the law is and govern themselves accordingly. Although such action would probably greatly diminish legal business we think good lawyers would all approve it. If acts of assembly, like wheat, were worth a dollar a bushel, there would be some use in producing them, but as most of them are of little if any value, and the great bulk are positively injurious, it is better to dispense with them.

The Truth.

The Commonwealth of Philadelphia speaks out in relation to some of the delegates to the next Democratic State Convention, and appeals to the rest of the State to save the reputation of the party, by expelling them. It says:

It was the hope of the people that the Democracy would exert the inherent power in its organization to confer the important public trusts of city government on able, fearless, capable, honest men. The wish has been the father to the thought, for a large majority of the nominees of the Democratic party for city offices are entirely unworthy of the positions accorded them.

As to the delegates from this city to the next State Convention, there are some whose names appear on the list of "honored representatives" who, we assert, will never be admitted into a Democratic Convention if the delegates from the party in the State, outside of Philadelphia, are unwilling to admit as equals in Democratic principles and practices, the "politician" who votes against his party, or the trickster whose allegiance to cash is his highest attribute in political morals, or the condemned "rounder" who, for "thirty drinks" debauches delegates, or the "ringsters" who prepare in advance "certificates of election" which never represented the actions of conventions. Such has been the demoralization produced by the Radical party in this city that it is now epidemic in political circles and contagious among fifth-rate politicians.

White Washing of Cameron.

In 1862 the lower House of Congress passed a resolution condemning Gen. Cameron, then Secretary at War, for making a series of extravagant contracts, for the special benefit of a peculiar class of people, a coterie or political family, specially known as his "friends." It was understood at the time that this action and Cameron's removal from office were rendered necessary to enable the Government to obtain loans in New York.

In the expiring days of the late Congress, the resolution of censure was rescinded, and the allegation was freely made by the Republican leaders that President Lincoln had "assumed the responsibility of the acts for which Cameron was condemned." Why, then, was not the rescinding resolution adopted at the time? The fact is, there is no truth in the assertion. To break his fall, it was claimed by Cameron's friends that he was censured for the enlistment of negro troops, and that was the act assumed by Lincoln—that is, he said it was not Cameron's at all, but his own. Certainly he never endorsed Cameron's contracts, and no such document can be shown. It was for making them that the resolution of censure was passed

As to this latter day white-washing, without a vote of yeas and nays being called, it is only in other words saying: "You have one foot in the grave—we are willing to let you go in an unblotted shroud." It is a piece of cheap benevolence—an emblematic kind of sugar-plum to stop whining, or please a little one.

Next Governor.

Several western papers are urging the nomination of Hon. James H. Hopkins, of Pittsburgh, for Governor. He is a man of ability, of high personal character and comes from the best of stock, being a son of Hon. Wm. Hopkins, of Washington, deceased. He was elected to Congress last fall over Gen. Negley, in one of the strong Republican districts of Allegheny, by a decided majority. In 1872 he was one of the Democratic candidates for Congressman at large and made a most creditable run. He would be a strong candidate and would make a good Governor. There will be other western candidates, it is said, who have not yet been announced.

Radical Extravagance.

For the last four fiscal years the expenditures of the United States Government, exclusive of the interest on the Public Debt, premiums paid on bonds purchased for the Sinking Fund, and the Post Office expenses so far as they are covered by the earnings of that department, have been as follows:

Year ending June 30, 1871,	$157,583,828
Year ending June 30, 1872,	153,201,856
Year ending June 30, 1873,	180,488,637
Year ending June 30, 1874,	178,618,985
Total 1871 and 1872,	310,785,684
Total 1873 and 1874,	359,107,622
Increase in 1873 and 1874,	48,321,938
Average increase per year,	24,160,969
1874 more than 1872,	25,417,129

The cost of the Government can be and should be diminished thirty million dollars a year. This is a very moderate estimate, and is, in fact, just what Messrs. Dawes and Garfield pledged themselves and their party to at the close of the last session of Congress. Ten million dollars can be obtained by cutting down the cost of the navy, and that establishment would still be dear at half its price. Public buildings and river and harbor improvements are now costing fifteen millions a year. In the year ended June 30, 1860, less than twelve hundred thousand dollars were expended on them. Another ten millions can be saved here. The third ten can be had by mustering out a few regiments from the army of incompetent and too often, unfaithful office-holders. In nearly every branch of the public service two men are employed to do one man's work. The Treasury bureaus, many of them at all events, the Customs service, the Department of Justice, the Capitol, the Interior Department, and most branches of the public service, are overrun with men, women and boys who do not do two fair day's work in a week. Our import trade is far below its dimensions in 1872, yet it cost $6,950,190 to collect the customs in 1872, $7,079,743 in 1873, and $7,319,918 in 1874. Without entering further into details, we are confident that no sane person will deny that ten million dollars in salaries can and ought to be lopped off the National expenditures.—Reading Gazette.

New Counties.

A new county bill is pending before the Legislature, with a probability of its final passage, for the erection of new counties under the limitations of the new Constitution, which provide that the new fledglings must contain 400 square miles and the lines dare not run within ten miles of a present county seat. The new county must also contain 20,000 inhabitants and must not leave the counties from which it is taken with less than the number of square miles and population required for the new. So much is settled by the Constitution.

The Legislature now proposes a plan by which new counties may be formed. The details are of no present importance. The one provision of interest is that, after complying with the Constitution and Legislative conditions, the project is to be left to the decision of the people within the proposed new county, and the rest of the people of the counties proposed to be divided will have no voice in the matter. The bill as it now stands is in the interest of those who want new counties. In discussing the bill the Luzerne Union says:

Under this bill, old Luzerne will be carved up effectually. The old part of the county will have no vote or voice in the matter, and the seceding sections will readily depart under the hope of being benefitted by the new county seats and the many new offices. "Lackawanna" county would be the first in order with the seat at Scranton; "Pardee" county would be the second in order with the seat at Hazleton; "Moosic" county would be third on the programme with the seat at Carbondale; and "Hollenback" county would fall into line, with Shickshinny or Berwick for the county seat.

Besides the proposition to take off a slice from the upper end of this county, with a view to making Berwick a county seat, there is also a Schuylkill project, to make Ashland a county seat, cutting Centralia and Conyngham from this county. Whether Berwick is more than ten miles from the extreme limits of the Town of Bloomsburg, in a straight line, may be a matter of some doubt. Scott township might be added as additional wards and that would settle the matter.

The physicians in the Legislature have a bill before that body designed to "regulate" the sale of patent medicines—that is, in plainer terms, to destroy the sale. While such legislation may be made annoying to dealers, it will be ineffective for good. That the sale of those medicines do material harm is by no means established, and that many people at least think they are benefitted by them is quite certain. While this is the case they will be used, and of course sold and bought, in spite of legislative enactments. This matter of dictating to people by legislative enactment what they may or may not use has been sufficiently tested to satisfy every body that it is wholly impossible and only amounts to a public annoyance, ill-will, litigation and fruitless expense. If people want to take medicines let them do so, without thrusting an act of Assembly under their noses to increase the nausea, or popularizing what is at worst a comparatively harmless folly by gravely interposing the State as an objector to its indulgence.

We observe that the druggists exchange of Philadelphia has unanimously protested against the passage of the bill, as simply an impediment to trade.

If fanciful legislators are suffered to have their way people will in time have to consult the acts of Assembly before they get up in the morning to see at what hour it is legal to put on breeches.

Speaker of the Next House.

We are assured from various sources that Hon. Samuel J. Randall, of this State, is the most promising candidate that has yet been named for Speaker of the next House. Thoroughly honest and capable, with long experience as a Representative, no man in the ensuing Congress would fill the Speaker's chair with more ability and honor than Mr. Randall. But for the single mistake of voting for the extra pay, Mr. Randall's career in Congress has been unexceptionable.—Erie Observer.

It is scarcely in harmony with propriety to condemn a man forever for a single wrong act or error of judgment, and when the objection to which the Observer alludes is removed, Mr. Randall looms up as an unexceptionable candidate for Speaker of the next House of Congress. His qualifications, never doubted, were fully proved and illustrated by the great struggles of the late Congress, wherein, as the parliamentary leader of the Democrats, he completely non-plused and defeated the two-thirds Radical majority, until he compelled them to resort to the desperate remedy of altering the rules to suit the exact case. That alteration now stands to plague and punish its inventors and to benefit that Democracy Mr. Randall so gallantly led, for whose injury it was intended.

Pennsylvania is entitled to the honor of the Speakership and the name of Mr. Randall will be presented with entire unanimity. It ought to be accorded by general consent.

Negroes all over the South are already testing the Civil-rights-equality bill by obtruding themselves wherever they know they are not wanted. The better class of them, however, refrain from such action.

New Hampshire Election.

As usual for several years past the election in New Hampshire is very close, but the Republicans claim to have carried the State. As in all New England States, a candidate for Governor must have a majority of all the votes polled to be elected. Last year there was no choice, the Prohibition candidate having votes enough to defeat both the candidates of the Democratic and Republican parties. This year these mostly voted for the Republican candidates for Governor and Assemblymen, which has probably elected the former and a majority of the latter.

In the first Congressional district the Democratic candidate is elected by an increased majority, the second district is doubtful, and a Republican is elected in the third. The delegation in the late Congress stood one Democrat and two Republicans.

The Democrats claim a majority of State Councillors, who largely control the Governor in his action.

As often stated in these columns heretofore, we have much less hope of the yankee States than of those of the middle, west and south. Yankees of the puritan breed have a kind of fondness for dictation and hard masters.

There is a vast amount of truth in this pithy summary which the St. Louis Republican makes of General Grant's six years of presidential service: "He has established precedents which will vex us as long as the nation lives, and he has set an example which embraces all those blunders and crimes which the ruler of a free country should avoid. He wrought more damage to the republican system in these six years than his successors can repair in the next fifty, and by his principles and actions has done more to demoralize public sentiment and weaken public confidence in the stability of free institutions than all the trials and tyrannies of civil war. And with these credentials he has the magnificent impudence to aspire a third term, and there are fools and knaves who are willing to encourage and assist him in it!"

State Capitol.

On Monday last a joint resolution was offered in the House at Harrisburg looking to the removal of the State Capitol to some other point—Philadelphia being intended. It failed by yeas 62, nays 102. Messrs McHenry and Ryan were absent. As there is no law to compel any body to go to the Legislature, it might be well enough for those gentlemen who do not like Harrisburg to resign and cease troubling the people.

While a vindictive majority in Congress menaces the country with eternal conflicts through force bills and other measures of partisan oppression, the alarmed capitalist buttons up his pocket book and refuses to make investments. Yet people are still wondering why business continues depressed, trade languishes and prosperity refuses to return. Confidence is a plant which does not flourish under such treatment.—Patriot.

The Supreme Court Judges of Pennsylvania want the Legislature to pass a law that no case can be carried up to the Supreme Court in which the claim is less than $500 00. This would simply be an outrage. If these Judges do not like to be kept busy let them resign. In this Republican government we want no pensioned aristocracy or no more laws cutting out poor claimants from full opportunity to get full justice.—Sunbury Democrat.

The Legislature of North Carolina expelled a member, named J. W. Thorne, because of his non-belief in the existence of God. It appears that Thorne is a carpet-bagger from Chester county, in this State, and outraged the religious sentiments of the people of the old North State by printing and circulating a pamphlet in which he treated at length the question of the existence and non-existence of a Supreme Being. It is not probable that all carpet-baggers at the South agree with Thorne; but they certainly act as though they did.

Henry White, Esq., has been elected President of the Lumberman's Exchange, Williamsport. One of the largest operators, Mr. White is also a gentleman of great ability, who will give strength and efficiency to any institution over which he presides. The Lumber interest of the West Branch, controlled by the Exchange, is far the largest manufacturing interest in this section of the State and of course has an important bearing upon the general interests of the people of all this region. Col. Embick, a most efficient and gentlemanly officer, was unanimously re-elected Secretary.

The aggregate sum appropriated by the two general bills passed by the late Congress is about one hundred and seventy-five millions. Other bills making appropriations will increase this figure to over two hundred millions. The people raise the funds!

Mr Ferry, of Michigan, has been elected President pro tem of the U. S. Senate; which is a triumph for the west over yankee land.

Excerpts and News Items from Exchanges.

Butler is having his revenge. The Republicans repudiated him, and, in return for the snubbing, he has inflicted upon them the Civil Rights law.

Hon. John A. Magee, of New Bloomfield, Perry county, in connection with Hon. John J. Davis, West Virginia, will at an early day commence the publication of a first class daily paper at Washington.

An exchange says "Grant's ideas upon any given subject are like a Montana miner's shirt—he never has but one at a time, and he never changes it, but keeps it on until it is worn out."

The "Local Option" bill before the Massachusetts Legislature has been adorned with an amendment which gives to women the right to vote on the question of "license or no license" in towns and cities.

In order that Grant may keep a paid army at the south the people are asked to pay $8,000,000 in the form of increased tax on sugar; $4,000,000 on tobacco; and $8,000,000 on other manufactures of articles of necessity from cotton, wool, leather, iron and steel. Is Radical administration worth the price of it?

It is in the highest degree creditable to the Jewish people of Philadelphia that though they number about ten thousand souls in that city there is but one of their race in the county prison; and the claim of the Jewish Messenger that an investigation of facts in other cities would show an equally pleasing aspect has reasonable grounds of probability.

A talking machine has been constructed in Washington by an ingenious mechanic connected with the Patent Office, which pronounces distinctly all the elements of speech. One would think there were talking machines enough in Washington already, without taxing the ingenuity of mechanics to increase them.

Harry White now wants to be the next State Treasurer. There's check for you.—Greensburg Argus.

The Lewistown Gazette says the loss by the destruction of the new bridge, across the Juniata at that place will be $30,000.

The West Branch furniture factory at Williamsport, was destroyed by fire March 3d. The loss is estimated at $16,000, with an insurance of $10,000.

Business With Banks.

If you have any business with a bank, put it off until 3 o'clock, or if possible, a little later, as it looks more business like to rush in just as the bank is closing.

Never put stamps on your checks before you get to the bank, but give the Teller two cents and ask him to lick it and cancel it for you; the teller expects to lick all the stamps, and it is a source of disappointment to him when people insist on doing it themselves.

In depositing money try and get it upside down and wrong end foremost so that the teller may have a little exercise in straightening it before counting. It is best not to take your bank book with you but call at another time to have it entered, you can thus make two trips to the bank where one would answer.

If a check is made payable to your order, be careful not to endorse it before handing to the teller, but let him return it to you and wait while you endorse it; this helps pass the time and is a pleasure and relief to the teller.

You can generally save time when making a deposit by counting your money down to the teller, as you can count more speedily and correctly than he can.

If you make a deposit of a hundred dollars and give a check for fifty, it is a good thing to call frequently at the bank and ask how your account stands, as it impresses the officers favorably with your business qualifications.

Never keep any record of when your notes fall due, and then if they are protested censure the bank for not giving you notice.

Always date your checks ahead, it is a never failing sign that you keep a good balance in bank, or if you do not wish it generally known that you are doing a good business, do not deposit your money until about the time you expect your check will be in.

A strict observance of the foregoing rules says an exchange, will make your account desirable for any bank, and make you a general favorite with all bankers.

We hear of a new voice raised for repudiation, and it is not from the south, either; it is in Massachusetts. The New England labor reform league, at its meeting at Boston on the first, adopted the following resolutions among others:

Resolved, That the election of Andrew Johnson to the United States Senate is an indirect indorsement of our doctrine, that contracts involving usury are morally void; and the south will ultimately unite with the industrial masses of the north decreeing the repudiation, not only of the fictitious national war debt, but of all other so-called debts the principal whereof has been paid in the form of interest.

"Resolved, That if General Sheridan wishes to suppress 'banditti' we commend him to the national banks with their retained advocates in Congress and State Legislatures, and to their commander-in-chief, Ulysses S. Grant, President of a military despotism called the United States."

An explosion of gas in the basement of the Senate chamber put that dignified body to flight the other day. Explosions of gas in the chamber itself is so common that it does not frighten anybody, but it is not of a dangerous character.

Snow is piled all over Town in miniature mountains.

M. E. Jackson, Esq., of Berwick, has associated his son, Charles B. Jackson, with him in the practice of law.

A Theatrical company with the distinguished actress Miss Susan Dennin, will perform at the Opera House in Bloomsburg on Friday and Saturday evenings of this week.

The Northumberland Press says a woman in Union county celebrated her one hundred and ninth birthday recently by dancing with her great grandson.

A new cash T[illegible] store has been opened next door to Hender[illegible]'s drug store. All kinds of family supplies will be kept on hand and sold for cash only. Advertisement next week.

A sportsmans' association, with Hon. W. L. Dewart as President, has been formed at Sunbury, with the object of the protection of game. It will have a representative in every township in the county. We hope to see the example imitated in Columbia county.

We hear of a good many barns being injured by the weight of snow upon the roofs, and some being crushed. Among the latter is the county barn for the sheriff's use. No cattle were injured. It will be well for farmers to look to their barns, especially if a rain fall should occur.

By consent of Council, Chief Woodward has appointed the following policemen, viz: John T. Reed, E. C. Jones, Daniel Leacock, Norman Purcell, Samuel Jacoby, James Shultz, S. W. Smitt, Thomas Vanaata and J. R. Fans. With this efficient force peace should reign in Bloomsburg.

Any of our subscribers wanting their paper sent to a different post office after the 1st of April should not fail to name the post office at which they have been receiving the paper. A neglect of this often puts us to a great deal of trouble to find the subscriber's name.

SALES.—The following register of sales will be of interest to buyers as well as those who expect to sell, and have not yet fixed the day:

William White, of Scott township, will sell live-stock, farming utensils and household furniture, on Thursday, March 25.

Petitions are in circulation in this county and are being generally signed asking the Legislature to reduce the fees of Notaries Public for protesting notes. The present fees are two dollars and fifty cents on each note protested. As it is only a few minutes work it is proposed to reduce them to fifty cents, as in nearly all other States.

All official fees are too high and ought either to be entirely abolished or very much reduced.

To cure dull times apply an advertisement to the afflicted part.

A sign board can't tell anything. It takes an advertisement to do that.

All who advertise do not get rich, but precious few get rich without it.

The world is full of advertising yet every one wants to see what is new.

The world's memory is short. It will forget if you do not jog it frequently.

Early to bed and early to rise will all be in vain if you don't advertise.

The world is always sure to find an honest man; but it will find him out a great deal quicker if he advertises.

That "animile" (beast or devil) we referred to lately as interfering with the peace and quiet of [illegible] in this vicinity, according to a statement of the Republican, is a rather benevolent lover of fresh meat and music. It recently followed a "violinist" who was returning from a ball in Mt. Pleasant, late at night, with a quarter of [illegible] on his shoulder. The music man kindly [illegible] several dividends of his meat with his [illegible] follower, and finally treed high up in the [illegible] of a [illegible] house, from which point he entertained the terrible beast with his choicest efforts on his banjo. It is estimated that the monster (whatever it be) did not leave till morning, and if so was probably charmed by the music, which would indicate refined feeling. It did not propose to eat the musician or his instrument, as we understand it, though it showed fondness both for fresh meat and music—a charge that might with propriety be made against some even very circumspect people. In fact it has so far merely demonstrated a love for the company of night-walkers, whose peace only it disturbs.

A distinguished official of Bloomsburg informed us a few days ago that the editor of the COLUMBIAN was "bilious" when he wrote the account of Councilmanic proceedings last week. As the gentleman's veracity stands above suspicion, and is corroborated by the additional fact that the editor resides in the vicinity of the skating park-frog-pond on Fifth street, we give the old Council the benefit of the statement.

The freak of the weather, however, took advantage of the new officials on Sunday last, when people could not lawfully work, and filled the gutters full of snow. We are not advised that the Council mean to make an attack upon him, but on Sunday morning the Town was beautifully embellished with windrows of snow lining the edges of the streets, and Centre was rendered almost impassible, being piled to the middle from both sides, even though the gutter decree was not nearly complied with. Either the Council must stretch the street, yield its ordinance and consequently its dignity, or the controlling power over storms must cease to send so much snow. Which will yield is not within the ken of the writer, but it will scarcely be the Council.

The glorious results of Councilmanic engineering and frog pond construction will be fully apparent whenever old Sol takes a hand in the fray! Fifth Avenue from Market to Centre will then present one of the handsomest little lakes that ever existed in this region, and as the people in the vicinity will have their cellars well filled, there will be no Dives-like cry for water! Were not the season of the year unpropitious for such exercises, what an opportunity would be afforded the boys for performing their ablutions! But there will be plenty of opportunities for such displays at every thunder shower during the summer.

People should not imagine that rival constructions are attempted to be established where Third and Fourth streets cross Centre. These are only miniature affairs set up for the use training and exercise of spring ducks. They are rarely much more than a foot in depth and are not at all illustrative of the Councilmanic genius for the creation of first class skating parks.

We are constrained to admit that the present Council deserves no credit for the establishment of these ornamental works—they having just assumed office—and it is even charged that they mean to destroy them. If so, their perversity will not equal the body that has just demised.

As to the fining of those who kept their pavements clean but neglected the gutters, while those who did neither were negatively complimented, the new Council could not comprehend the philosophy that produced such a result, and accordingly remitted the fines.

Our Bloomsburg subscribers are requested to be prompt in reporting any omissions in the delivery of their papers. The new carrier has omitted the delivery of some and their may be other cases.

ROBBERY.—On the morning of the 4th inst. a very fine Lady Elgin gold watch and chain, No. 40,835, was stolen from the bed room of Mr. Charles, proprietor of the Forks Hotel, and also an old gold watch, with a child's gold necklace chain attached. The thief has not as yet been detected.

The Snyder Tannery, in Bloomsburg, has again been opened. The new proprietor, Mr. G. A. Herring, now residing at Shenandoah, was formerly a citizen of this county, and is well known as a correct and reliable business man and a most worthy gentleman. See advertisement.

The hydrophobia case, at Catawissa, resulting from the bite of a cat, turns out, as we supposed, and as nearly if not all such cases do, to have been simply severe inflammation, with consequent high fever and delirium. The patient is recovering.

On Saturday last, Mr. Henry Doak, who is tax collector of Briar Creek township, and his wife, made a visit to Danville, to remain until Monday, leaving a son and daughter at home. On Saturday evening the son went to Berwick to attend a concert, the daughter retiring early to bed. About nine o'clock she heard persons entering the house, who remained until after ten, rummaging up and down stairs. Frightened, she gave no alarm. Shortly after ten her brother returned, when she called to him and the thieves immediately left. They obtained nothing but some food, Mr. Doak having taken nearly all his money with him.

J. Schuyler & Son are successors to J. F. Wideman & Co., in the hardware business in Bloomsburg. Mr. W. retiring from the firm but at present remaining in the store. The establishment is an extensive one that has heretofore given general satisfaction, and the new firm is merely a part of the old. Dr. Schuyler is well-known to the people of the county and commendation of his business qualifications from us would therefore be surplusage. Bloomsburg is now well supplied with two extensive hardware establishments that will compare favorably with any in the region.

Snow fell here, between Sunday morning and Monday morning last, to the depth altogether of about 25 inches, it is said, (for we did not measure it,) but not more than 19 inches of it remained on the ground at one time. Such a shoveling of snow as was carried on during Monday forenoon is rarely witnessed. Piled up four and five feet in height people could only see each others' heads as they passed along the cleaned pavements. But few persons came to the Town during the day and those generally wished they had stayed at home. The warm sun, however, diminished the depth of snow somewhat on Monday and materially assisted in clearing the pavements. Fines for not keeping the gutters open are now in order, and street commissioner Baron will have to keep a sharp eye to the crossings to prevent the overflowing of pavements at many points.

The storm of Sunday last extended over the whole country from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. In the Northern and Western States snow fell to about the depth it was here, and in the Southern States it rained instead. The quantity of snow throughout the colder States, and especially in the mountains, is now unusually large. If it shall go off by the sun melting it, little harm will be done, as in that case southern and eastern exposures are first cleared, but if it is melted by a warm rain or wind destructive floods must occur in all quarters. Persons situated at doubtful or dangerous points had better be fully prepared for the worst.

The railroads all over the country were blockaded by the snow and mail failures occurred everywhere. The weather prophets say more snow is still to fall. People may well begin to feel glad that July and August are approaching.

A WRONG CUSTOM CORRECTED.

It is quite generally the custom to take strong liver stimulants for the cure of liver complaint, and both the mineral and vegetable kingdoms have been diligently searched to procure the most drastic and poisonous purgatives, in order to produce a powerful effect upon the liver, and arouse the lagging and enfeebled organ. This system of treatment is on the same principle as that of giving a weak and debilitated man large portions of brandy to enable him to do a certain amount of work. When the stimulus is withheld, the organ, like the system, gradually relapses into a more torpid or sluggish and weakened condition than before. What then is wanted? Medicines, which, while they cause the bile to flow freely from the liver, as that organ is toned into action, will not overwork and thus debilitate it, but will, when their use is discontinued, leave the liver strengthened and healthy. Such remedies are found in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Purgative Pellets.

A CURE OF LIVER DISEASE.
RUSK, TEXAS, May 10, 1873.

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR—My wife last year at this time was confined to her bed with chronic liver disease. I had one of the best doctors to see her and he gave her up to die, when I came upon some of your medicines. I bought one bottle and commenced giving it. She then weighed 82 pounds, now she weighs 150 pounds and is stout and hearty. She has taken eight bottles in all, of your medicines for your medicines. WILLIAM MEAKEL.

FROM THE "SCRIPTURE," "BUFFALO BILL."
Holland [illegible] Hill, April 20, 1873.

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.: Sir—I have now taken four bottles of your Golden Medical Discovery in connection with your Pellets, and must say that nothing I have ever taken for my liver has done me so much good. I feel like a new man. Thanks to your wonderful medicines.
W. F. CODY, ("Buffalo Bill.")

If you do try KUNKEL'S BITTER WINE OF IRON.
I only ask a trial of this valuable tonic!

Beware of counterfeits, as Kunkel's Bitter Wine of Iron is the only sure and effectual remedy in the known world for the permanent cure of Dyspepsia and Debility, and as there are a number of imitations offered to the public, I would caution the community to purchase none but the genuine article, manufactured by E. F. Kunkel, and having his stamp on the cork of every bottle. The very fact that others are attempting to imitate this valuable remedy proves its worth and speaks volumes in its favor. Get the genuine.

Sold only in $1 bottles. Sold by Druggists and dealers everywhere.

TAPE WORM REMOVED ALIVE.

Head and all complete in two hours. No fee till head passes. Seat, Pin and Stomach Worms removed by Dr. Kunkel, 259 North Ninth St., Philadelphia. Send for circular or ask your druggist for a bottle of Kunkel's Worm Syrup. It never fails. Price $1.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser, having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge), with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure cure for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, &c.

Parties wishing the prescription will please address
Rev. E. A. WILSON,
19 Penn St., Williamsburgh, New York.

A ROYAL ORGAN.

The stomach has been well named a "regal organ," since it sways and controls the entire system, overy gland, fibre and nerve sympathizing with it as the servants of a prince sympathize with their monarch. Each one of them is fed and sustained by it—even the brain itself, the centre of sensation, is absolutely dependent upon it for sustenance. Consequently, when the stomach fails to perform its allotted functions the subordinate organs also falter in their duty. The reason why Hostetter's Stomach Bitters have such a wonderfully beneficial effect upon the general health, and are such a reliable preventive of disease, is that they speedily overcome weakness or disorder of the stomach, and thus insure complete nourishment of the entire system and a healthful performance of its various functions. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of these Bitters, which is of the purest description [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] alteratives and tonics [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] materia medica. But it is not alone the fact that the [illegible] [illegible] ingredients enter into the composition of the Bitters that constitutes them such a [illegible] tonic and corrective, but also that they are so happily combined that the full effect of results [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] disordered or debilitated system. The digestive and secretive organs are [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible], which extends [illegible] [illegible] the brain, the nerves and the circulation. The influence thus exerted is fruitful of those great sanitary results which have built up the [illegible] of this truly national medicine.

If a man wants a bottle of whiskey, let him buy it and take it home like a man, and not sneak into [illegible] with a bottle of "[illegible]" or "cordial," and pretend that it is medicine. If he wants a tonic that is something better than a temporary stimulant, he should get a bottle of Peruvian Syrup, (an Iron Tonic) that will vitalize the blood and give durable strength to the system.

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A Gentleman who suffered for years from Nervous Debility, Premature Decay, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion will, for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and direction for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence,
JOHN B. OGDEN, 42 Cedar st., New York.

MONEY MUSK.

In shirt of check and tallowed hair
The fiddler sits in the bullrush chair
Like Moses' basket standing there
On the brink of the Father Nile.
He feels his fiddle's slender neck—
Picks out the notes with thumb and check,
And times the tune with nod and beck,
And thinks it a weary while.
All ready! Now he gives the call,
Cries, "Honor to the ladies!" All!
The jolly tides of laughter fall
And ebb in a happy smile.

"Begin." D-o-w-n goes the bow on every string.
"First couple join right hands and swing!"
As light as any blue-bird's swing,
"Swing once and a half times round;"
Whirls Mary Martin all in blue—
Calico gown and stockings new,
And tinted eyes that tell you true,
Dance all to the dancing sound.

She flits about big Moses Brown,
Who holds her hands to keep her down,
And thinks her hair a golden crown,
And his heart turns over once!
His cheek with Mary's breath is wet,
It gives a second somerset,
He means to win the maiden yet,
Alas for the awkward dunce!

"Your stoga boot has crushed my toe!"
"I'd rather dance with one-legged Joe!"
"You clumsy fellow!" "Pass below,
And the first pair dance apart."
Then "Forward six!" advance, retreat,
Like midges gay in sunbeam street
'Tis Money-Musk by merry feet,
And the Money-Musk by heart!

"Three-quarters round your partner swing."
Across the seat!" The rafters ring,
The boys and girls have taken wing
And have brought their roses out!
'Tis "Forward six!" with rustic grace,
Ah, rarer far than "swing to place!"
Than golden clouds of old point lace
They bring the dance about.

Then clasping hands all—"Right and left!"
All swiftly weave the measure deft
Across the woof in loving weft
And the Money-Musk is done!
Oh, dancers of the rustling husk,
Good-night sweet-hearts, 'tis growing dusk,
Good-night for aye to Money-Musk,
For the heavy march began!

An Indiana Sunday School man writes to a religious firm in New York: "Send me on some Sabbath School papers and books Let the books be about pirates and Indians as much as possible."

Deep learning will make you acceptable to the learned; but it is only an easy and obliging behavior and entertaining conversation that will make you agreeable in all companies.

* * *

"Our professor does wonderful things in surgery," said a young medical student; "he has actually made a new lip for a boy, taken from his cheek." "Ah well?,, said his old aunt, "many's the time I have known a pair taken from mine, and no very painful operation either."

* * *

The champion deadhead has been discoveren in a legislator, who having received a free pass from a railroad company, and not having occasion to use it, actually called at the superintendent's office and asked if they were willing to give him the value of the ticket in money.

* * *

He is a poet who says: "I'm sitting sadly on the strand, that stretches to the water's brink; and as the days slip slowly by, I idly fold my hands and think." While he is sitting on the strand with idly folded hands, his family at home may be suffering for the necessaries of life. He should try and skirmish around before the day slips slowly by and secure a job of digging a cellar.

* * *

Children are often spoiled because they get no credit for what they do well. Of censure they get their due; but of praise never. They do something which they feel to be praiseworthy, but it is not noticed. When a child takes pains to do well, it feels itself paid for every endeavor by praise, and the most unsophisticated child knows when praise is due.

* * *

Every true hero grows by patience. People who have always been prosperous are seldom the most worthy and never the most strong. He who has not been compelled to suffer has probably not begun how to learn to be magnanimous, as it is only by patience and fortitude that we can know what it is to overcome evils, or feel the pleasure of forgiving them.

* * *

If the disposition to speak well of others were universally prevalent, the world would become a comparative paradise. The opposite disposition is the Pandora-box, which, when open, fills every house and very frequently every neighborhood with pain and sorrow. How many enmities and heart-burnings flow from this source! How much happiness is interrupted and destroyed! Envy, jealousy, and the malignant spirit of evil, when they find vent by the lips, go forth on their mission like foul fiends to blast the reputation and peace of others.

* * *

DON'T SCOLD.—For the sake of your children don't do it. It is a great misfortune to have children reared in the presence and under the influence of a scold. The effect of the everlasting complaining and fault-finding of such persons is to make the young who hear it unamiable, malicious, callous-hearted, and they often learn to take pleasure in doing the very things for which they receive such tongue-lashings. As they are always getting the blame of wrong doing, whether they do or not, they think they might as well do wrong as right. They lose all ambition to strive for the favorable opinion of the fault-finder, since they see they always strive in vain. Thus a scold is not only a nuisance, but a destroyer of the morals of children. If these unloved, dreaded people could only see themselves as others see them, they would flee to the mountains in very shame.

Good Nature.

Be good natured if you can, for there is no attraction so great, no charm so admirable. A face that is full of the expression of amiability is always beautiful. It needs no paint and no powder. Cosmetics are superfluous for it. Rouge cannot improve its cheeks, nor lily white mend its complexion Its loveliness lies beyond all this. It is not the beauty that is but skin deep. For when you gaze into the face of a noble man or woman, it is not the shape of the feature you really see, nor yet the tint of the cheek, the hue of the lip, or the brilliancy of the eye. You see the nameless something which animates all these, and leaves for your instinct a sense of grateful fascination; you see an indescribable embodiment of a heartfelt goodness within, which wins your regard in spite of external appearance, and defies all the critical rules of the æsthetic. Cultivate good-nature, therefore. It is better than "apples of gold set in pictures of silver," for gold will take to itself wings and fly away, silver will tarnish in time, and both, when abundant, lose their comparative value; but good nature never, never loses its worth—never abandons its possessor to the mental poverty of the malicious—never loses its hold on the esteem of the world. It is always in fashion and always in season. Everybody admires it. It never grows stale. It costs little to acquire and nothing to keep. Yet it is beyond diamonds in its worth to its owners, and can neither be stolen nor lost, however neglected. Surely this is a jewel that merits a protection. Possess yourselves of it, young women; no talisman will find you so bewitching in the judgment of the sensible among the other sex.

* * *

"Excuse my Glove."

Certain kinds of mistaken politeness, sincere as they are, are absurd enough to be grotesque. A common mistake of this sort with some persons, even in large cities, is to say, "Excuse my glove," when they offer their hand to a casual acquaintance, or on introduction to a stranger. It might be inferred from this remark that the wearing of gloves is either extremely rare in a civilized community, or that the wearer wishes to advertise the extraordinary fact that he has gloves.

All he really desires is to appear polite, never suspecting for a moment that he is simply ridiculous.

If you offer to shake hands with any one in a place where it is customary to wear gloves you certainly need no excuse for compliance with the habit. You might, with equal reason, on receiving a visitor at your house, apologize to him for not removing your coat before bidding him welcome.

The superfluous phrase probably had its origin in the days when gloves were clumsy, and used more for protection than as an essential of dress. Then the naked hand was thought to be an evidence of good-will and cordiality. Since gloves have been universally adopted, the idea of asking pardon for wearing them is an anacronism as well as an impropriety.

Gloves are now made to fit exactly so that, were it courtesy to take them off on encountering one's friends or acquaintances, an amount of time and trouble would be required which would inevitably render a social greeting at once a comical exhibition and a bore.

* * *

Sleeplessness.

To take a hearty meal just before retiring is, of course, injurious, because it is very likely to disturb one's rest, and produce nightmare However, a little food at this time, if one is hungry, is decidedly beneficial; it prevents the gnawing of an empty stomach, with its attendant restlessness and unpleasant dreams, to say nothing of probable headache, or of nervous and other derangements, the next morning. One should no more lie down at night hungry than he should lie down after a very full dinner; the consequence of either being disturbing and harmful. A cracker or two, a bit of bread and butter, or cake, a little fruit—something to relieve the sense of vacuity, and so restore the tone of the system—is all that is necessary.

We have known persons, habitual sufferers from restlessness at night, to experience material benefit, even though they were not not hungry, by a very light luncheon before bed-time. In place of tossing about for two or three hours as formerly, they would soon grow drowsy, fall asleep, and not awake more than once or twice until sunrise. This mode of treating insomnia has recently been recommended by several distinguished physicians, and the prescription has generally been attended with happy results.—Scribner for March.

Tests of Character.

A great many admirable actions are overlooked by us, because they are so little and common. Take, for instance, the mother, who has had but broken slumber, if any at all, with the nursing babe, whose wants must not be disregarded; she would fain sleep awhile when the breakfast hour comes, but patiently and uncomplainingly she takes her seat at the table. Though exhausted and weary, she serves all with a refreshing cup of coffee or tea before she sips it herself, and often the cup is handed back to her to be refilled before she has had time to taste her own. Do you hear her complain—this weary mother—that her breakfast is cold before she has had time to eat it? And this not for one, but for every morning, perhaps, through the year. Do you call this a small thing? Try it, and see. Oh, how does woman shame us by her forbearance and fortitude in what are called little things? Ah, it is these little things which are the tests of character; it is by these "little" self-denials, born with such self-forgetting gentleness, that the humblest home is made beautiful to the eyes of angels, though we fail to see it, alas! until the chair is vacant, and the hand which kept in motion all the domestic machinery is powerless and cold.

* * *

A woman is privileged to change her mind, it is admitted very generally, but such a sudden change as occurred to three young ladies of Saginaw is seldom recorded. They met and concluded to pray for the welfare of their lovers, but the first one had not got very far along in her petition when it was discovered that they were all engaged to the same man. The religious exercises were at once terminated and an indignation meeting organized, the result of which was that the town counted in its census one young man less.

* * *

A minister going to visit one of his sick parishoners, asked him how he rested during the night. "Oh, wondrously ill, sir," he replied, "for mine eyes have not come together these three nights." "What is the reason of that?" said the other. "Alas! sir," said he, "because my nose was betwixt them."

* * *

Lord Derby said a good thing, when he wrote, "Whether I am happy or unhappy it is not my chief affair, what most and first concerns me is to find my work in life, to recognize it and to do it."

* * *

There is one single fact which one may oppose to all the wit and argument of infidelity, namely: that no man ever repented being a Christian on his death-bed.

VEGETINE

Strikes at the root of disease by purifying the blood restoring the liver and kidneys to healthy action, invigorating the nervous system.

VEGETINE

Is not a vile, nauseous compound, which simply purges the bowels, but a safe, pleasant remedy which is sure to purify the blood, and thereby restore the health.

VEGETINE

Is now prescribed in cases of scrofula and other diseases of the blood, by many of the best physicians, owing to its great success in curing all diseases of this nature.

VEGETINE

Does not deceive invalids into false hopes by purging and creating a fictitious appetite, but assists nature in clearing and purifying the whole system, leading the patient gradually to perfect health.

VEGETINE

Was looked upon as an experiment for some time by some of our best physicians, but those most incredulous in regard to its merit are now its most ardent friends and supporters.

VEGETINE

Instead of being a puffed-up medicine has worked its way up to its astonishing present success by actual merit in curing all diseases of the blood, of whatever nature.

VEGETINE

Says a Boston physician, "has no equal as a blood purifier. Hearing of its many wonderful cures after all other remedies had failed, I visited the laboratory and convinced myself of its genuine merit. It is prepared from barks, roots and herbs, each of which is highly effective, and they are compounded in such a manner as to produce astonishing results."

VEGETINE

Is acknowledged and recommended by physicians and apothecaries to be the best purifier and cleanser of the blood yet discovered, and thousands speak in its praise who have been restored to health.

PROOF.

WHAT IS NEEDED.

BOSTON, Feb. 13, 181.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—About one year since I found myself in a feeble condition from general debility. VEGETINE was strongly recommended to me by a friend who had been much benefitted by its use. I procured the article and after using several bottles, was restored to health and discontinued its use. I feel quite confident that there is no medicine superior to it for those complaints for which it is especially prepared, and would cheerfully recommend it to those who feel that they need something to restore them to perfect health. Respectfully yours,

U. L. PETTINGILL,
Firm of S. M. Pettengill & Co., 10 State st., Boston.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 26, 1872.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—The two bottles of VEGETINE furnished me by your agent, my wife has used with great benefit.

For a long time she has been troubled with dizziness and costiveness; these troubles are now entirely removed by the use of VEGETINE.

She was also troubled with Dyspepsia and general debility; and has been greatly benefitted.

THOS. GILMORE, 229½ Walnut street.

FEL MYSELF A NEW MAN.

NATICK, Mass., June 1st, 1872,

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—Through the advice and earnest persuasion of Rev. E. S. Best, of this place, I have been taking VEGETINE for dyspepsia of which I have suffered for years.

I have used only two bottles and already feel myself a new man. Respectfully,

DR. J. W. CARTER.

Report from a Practical Chemist and Apothecary.

BOSTON, Jan. 1, 1874.

Dear Sir—This to certify that I have sold at retail 154½ dozen (1852 bottles) of your VEGETINE since April 12, 1870, and can truly say that it has given the best satisfaction of any remedy for the complaints for which it is recommended, that I ever sold. Scarcely a day passes without some of my customers testify to its merits on themselves or their friends. I am perfectly cognizant of several cases of scrofulous tumors being cured by VEGETINE alone in this vicinity. Very respectfully yours,

A. I. GILMAN, 468, Broadway.

EUREKA
VINEGAR BITTERS

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

If men will enjoy good health, let them use VINEGAR BITTERS as a medicine, and avoid the use of alcoholic stimulants in every form.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial Affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc., etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS occasionally.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics, will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Jaundice.—In all cases of jaundice, rest assured that your liver is not doing its work. The only sensible treatment is to promote the secretion of the bile and favor its removal. For this purpose use VINEGAR BITTERS.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.
